CIRCULAR WALKS

ADDERBURY

CIRCULAR WALK & VILLAGE TRAIL

Circular Walk 3.6 miles/6 km Time 2 hours
Village Trail 1.8 miles/3 km Time 1.5 hours

Adderbury Circular Walk

Approx. 3.6 miles / 6 km

Adderbury lies 3 miles south of Banbury on the main Oxford Road (A4260). Bus services between Oxford and Banbury regularly stop at Adderbury.

The walk takes in fine views of the churches of three parishes and crosses pleasant undulating farm land, passing cottages and millstreams.

Grazing animals are to be found in several fields. Please keep dogs under close control and observe the Country Code at all times.

The walk is described and waymarked in an anti-clockwise direction, but once you have followed it that way, why not come back and try it the other way around?

The Village Trail (approx. 1.8 miles, 3km) is a tour around some of the most fascinating buildings and features of this historic village. The Village Trail can be enjoyed on its own or in conjunction with the Circular Walk. Most of the buildings described are people's homes, so please respect their privacy and view from a polite distance.

Car Parking

There is no designated car park in Adderbury, so please park considerately around the village. There is usually space at the start of the walk, along the south side of the Village Green.

Accessibility and Terrain

The Circular Walk is on a mixture of surfaced tracks and unsurfaced field paths, some of which may be wet and muddy. There are two stiles, several kissing gates and two narrow footbridges.

The Village Trail is mainly on pavements and quiet village roads. There is a section along unsurfaced track and across a playing field. There are no stiles or kissing gates. The route includes eight steps, a narrow (0.6 metre) footbridge, two ramps and a staggered barrier.

Please visit the website or contact us (details on back) for updated or more detailed accessibility information.

Introduction to Adderbury

The village is divided by the Sor Brook into East and West Adderbury. The first documented evidence of the village is in a will of 990, where it is written as Eadburgesbyrig. This suggests that the village may have been named after Eadburga of Aylesbury, a Mercian saint and princess (died c.650).

In the 13th Century the village and surrounding lands were divided between the Lords of four Manors. In 1381 The Bishop of Winchester split his holding in two. He gave his Rectory Manor (including St.Mary's Church) to New College Oxford, which he had recently founded. His successors retained the other part, Adderbury Manor, for a further four centuries, until 1801.

The Church of St Mary the Virgin is the outstanding and most obvious architectural feature of the village. It has been praised by such eminent authorities as Sir John Betjeman and Nicholas Pevsner, and been painted by John Piper. There are records of a church in the village from before the Norman Conquest, with the earliest parts of the present building dating from about 1280. The impressive spire is one of three in the area that are the subject of a local saying:

*“Bloxham for length
Adderbury for strength
King's Sutton for beauty.”*

Since Tudor times Adderbury has attracted the gentry to build themselves substantial homes and this trend was particularly strong in the 18th Century. The labour necessary to support these households led to the expansion of the village.

From medieval times agriculture was the main source of employment, but in the 19th Century local industries such as plush weaving and quarrying came to be important too. The Oxford canal brought bulk transport in 1790 and from 1874 to 1950 the village had its own railway station on a GWR branch line.

The older houses in the village are constructed of the local red marlstone (ironstone). For further information on Adderbury's geological history there is a separate "Secrets in the Landscape" trail leaflet (www.oxfordshiregt.org). Many old cottages in East Adderbury were demolished in the 1960s to make way for the new road and the Duke of Buccleuch's grand landscaping scheme for Adderbury House (see the separate "Adderbury Lakes Nature Reserve" leaflet). There is a strong tradition of Morris dancing in Adderbury, with two sides in the village. Thanks to the work of Janet Blunt (see points of interest) there are traditional Adderbury dances performed by sides all over the world. The village holds an annual "Day of Dance" festival every April.

Points of Interest

A Croft Lane

Until the Inclosure Award of 1768 this used to be the main road to Banbury

B Sor Brook Valley

This small river forms the boundary between Adderbury and the neighbouring parish of Bloxham. Its valley bottom is a particularly good example of the lowland river landscape of wetland pastures, hedgerows and pollarded riverside willows. It supports diverse botanical swards, several species of rare plants and a rich variety of invertebrate fauna, including the Marsh Fritillary Butterfly

C The Weir

On the bridge, take a moment to enjoy the sound of the water and a very attractive view of the Sor Brook. The automatic gauging station is part of a network which warns the Environment Agency of flood risk. It is linked by telemetry to their office in Wallingford

D Lower Grove Mill

The mill is recorded in the Domesday Book, together with five other mills in this section of the river. In the 15th century it was called Clare Mill. At one time the pleasant gardens at the mill formed part of a wider stretch of the Sor Brook. This was the spot where Henry Warriner's experimental steam launch "Firefly" would turn around (see E).

E Bloxham Grove House

This charming yeoman farmhouse was built in 1715. In the early 19th century Bloxham Grove belonged to George Warriner, an influential farmer who profited from the inclosures by successfully experimenting with new crops and agricultural methods. George's grandson, Henry, invented the oscillating steam launch engine in 1841. Henry also built the windmill. Though small, it was fully operational.

F Manor Road

Manor Road, known to generations of villagers as Mud End, was home to Adderbury cheese. The Victorian stone house (Court End), passed on your right halfway down the road, was a cheese-making premises. The flavour was not very good and it ceased to be made many years ago, although it was revived for a short while during the Second World War.

G Le Halle Place

On the left, shortly before joining the main village road, stands the imposing Le Halle Place (see Village Trail point 12). During the First World War this was the home of Janet Blunt, who compiled the manuscripts of the Adderbury Morris dance traditions. The Adderbury Morris sides always dance here on their annual Day of Dance, both in recognition of her work and as a tribute to her maid, Winnie Wyatt. Winnie saved the manuscripts from a clearing-out bonfire shortly after Miss Blunt's death in 1950. Both are now buried in the churchyard, where they are honoured annually by the Morris Men, who lay flowers on their graves.

Circular Walk Directions

9 Walk gently uphill along the field edge track (fence on your left) towards Bloxham Grove [E] on the hilltop. Go through a gate and continue to the corner of the garden wall (from here there is a view of the windmill and, in the distance, Bloxham Church).

10 Turn left at the track junction and go down the tree lined avenue (to your left there are views of Adderbury Church).

11 At the end of the avenue follow the path diagonally left, up a slope then across the centre of a field and over a stile.

12 Cross the next field, (bearing just slightly further left) then pass through a woodland strip. Follow the path down to a field gate with a stile tucked to its left.

13 Go over the stile, walk across the water meadow and through a kissing gate. Cross Sor Brook via the footbridge and a second gate.

14 Turn right and walk uphill, then through a gate between two stone walls. Walk along the alleyway and through a second gate onto Manor Road.

15 Turn left along Manor Road [F] and continue until you reach Le Halle Place [G] just before the junction. You can join the Village Trail instructions here (at point 12), or continue along Cross Hill Road to your start point at The Green.

8 On passing a reservoir (on your right), turn left onto a wide track and go over the bridge [C] [D]. Follow the track between the buildings, uphill, and through a field gate

6 At the bottom, go through a gap in the hedge (across a plank bridge) then turn left. Follow the ditch as it turns the corner, then turn left to cross over it and immediately right to go along a grass track

5 Go through the gate and along the field edge, with the hedge on your right (views of Bodicote ahead and Sor Brook Valley [B] to the left). After a wide gap in the hedge, continue straight ahead, downhill across the field.

4 On reaching a farm track, turn left through a kissing gate. Turn diagonally right and walk uphill, (following the line of telegraph poles) to a gate in the top corner (here you can turn and look back for a picturesque view of the village and church spire).

3 Stay on the path as it bears right, then goes through a gateway and merges onto a field edge path.

2 As the lane opens out into a field, bear left around the corner and continue through a scrub area at the base of a shallow bank.

1 Park beside The Green and walk into the village. Just before the hairdressing salon and notice board, turn right along Croft Lane [A]. Where the tarmac ends continue downhill, passing The Old Post House

Adderbury Village Trail

13 Turn right and walk along to the gates of Crosshill House with its impressive Georgian frontage concealing earlier foundations. Continue along Cross Hill Road. Just before the bus shelter turn right down Dog Close (formerly the site of kennels for the Duke of Buccleuch's hunting dogs).

12 Continue to the end of the green, then cross Manor Road to Le Halle Place, a substantial manor house dating mainly from the late 1600s, but with parts up to 300 years older. Its appearance was much altered by the insertion of large windows in the late 19th century.

10 Continue along Tanners Lane as it bears round to the right. At the end cross and turn right down Horn Hill Road. 80 metres along this road on the left are the gates of Adderbury Cemetery. Go through the gates and The Friends Meeting House is along the path on the right. This was built in 1675 by Bray Doyley (see Little Manor). In the late 17th century Adderbury was a stronghold of religious dissent, with 27 family names recorded as Quakers. Note that the Quaker gravestones on the left of the path only have one date. Fanny Buck's grave is on the right.

9 Walk diagonally across the field and through the gate. Bear left along Round Close Road and take the next left up Tanners Lane. At the top pause to look left along The Leys to a single unit house. This is a rare remaining example of the smallest type of village cottage, with one room up and one down.

14 At the end of Dog Close go up three steps, across the footbridge and up the churchyard path (5 more steps) to St. Mary's Church. (See Introduction to Adderbury.) Note the musicians' frieze above the porch and along the side wall. The carillon plays a tune on the bells every third hour from 6am until 9pm. During the Civil War the royalist vicar, Dr Oldys, was killed by Parliamentary troops. An information booklet is available inside.

15 Turn left at the Lych Gate and along Mill Lane. The Grange is on the left. The present house dates mainly from 1684, but retains some much earlier features. Originally the medieval rectory, it is reputed to have a passage leading to the church. Opposite The Grange is Church House, which was the village girls' school between 1832 and 1962 and now houses the village library.

16 Continue to the junction. On the left is the Tithe Barn, parts of which date from the 13th century. Look across to see Shepherds Keep, which was formerly the village infants school. Bear right and walk uphill, passing The Bell and village shop, back to your starting point by The Green.

1 Starting beside the Village Institute, with your back to the Oxford Road, walk towards the village centre. On your left is Rawlins House, this was the Grammar School endowed in 1589 by the will of Rev. Christopher Rawlins. From 1218 a market was held on the Village Green which was also the site for stocks, whipping post and until 1623, a cross.

2 Continue walking towards the village and on the left you pass the gateposts of South House and The Orchard. These are all that remain of the former Cobb Manor, a large and impressive house originally built by William Cobb in 1582. After the death of Sir George Cobb in 1762 it was leased to tenants and gradually fell into decline. By 1815 it was in ruins.

3 Continue past a minor junction and green. On the left is The Rookery, a 3 gabled Jacobean house. The date stone of 1656 on the porch refers to later extension and remodelling, but the core of the house is probably 15th century. The house contains a priest hole. It also has wall paintings dating from the Civil War period.

4 Continue downhill and bear left into Church Lane. At the end bear right along the narrow footpath. The house on the left is Ivy House, home of Fanny Buck (1869-1945), who was the last of the traditionally clothed Adderbury Quakers (see Friends Meeting House, No10).

5 At the end turn left into Mill Lane. On the corner is The Old Vicarage, built on the site of the medieval Vicarage House. The main part of the existing house is 16th and 17th century, much altered again in the early 18th century.

6 Pass St. Mary's Church on the right. Next to it is The Manor House (note the ornate chimneys), which dates mainly from the 16th century when it was the home of the Bustard family. Between 1780 and 1851 it was Dr Woolston's boarding school for boys.

7 Continue down Mill Lane to Adderbury Mill (The Old Mill), moved to its present position by the Duke of Argyll in the mid 1700s, as the original one spoilt the view of his grounds at Adderbury House. It was a working mill until the 1930s.

8 Follow the footpath across the mill stream and turn right. Briefly walk alongside the stream. Take the first left, down a short slope. Walk over the footbridge and bear right through the wooded area into Lucy Plackett Playing Field.
